

These pictures were taken on 1st November 2006 in Brenchley Gardens. When we visited Brenchley Gardens, gangs of youths were sitting around the memorial openly drinking cans of lager. When we politely asked them to move they became extremely abusive towards us. When we explained the purpose of our visit they told us that they had never heard of the Royal West Kent Regiment, they then proceeded to throw the poppy wreaths around the park! This is a sad indictment of our education system and clearly demonstrates what is wrong with our country...
